

ABSTRACT

A method, system, and computer program for real-time measurement and modification of the performance of communications on a large area network, such as the Internet, 5 based upon actual user experience. One embodiment performs a statistical analysis of access logs that record actual server usage by users. Based on such analysis, routing of communications over the network can be modified to improve overall communications performance.

2025 RELEASE UNDER E.O. 14176